UNIVERSITY OF MADRAS

A PROFILE

The University of Madras, along with the Universities of Mumbai and Calcutta, will be entering the sesqui-centennial year (150th year) of its establishment in 2006-2007. This is an important milestone not merely for the University of Madras but for the nation as a whole, as the establishment of these premier universities in 1857 also marks the genesis of modern India's higher education system.

The origins of the University of Madras can be traced to a public petition signed by 70,000 citizens and submitted to the Right Honourable Lord John Elphinstone, G.C.H., the then Governor of Madras when the Governor in Council was contemplating "some effective and liberal measures for the establishment of an improved system of national education". This public petition presented on 11.11.1839 by the then Advocate General Mr. George Norton pressed the need for an English College in the Madras city. Following this, Lord Elphinstone evolved a plan for the establishment of a Central Collegiate Institution or a 'University' with two components: (1) A High School for the cultivation of English literature, regional language, philosophy and science, and (2) A College providing instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science. As a follow up of this, the University Board was constituted in January 1840 with Mr. George Norton as its President. However, a systematic educational policy for India was formulated only 14 years later in the form of what has come to be known as 'Sir Charles Wood's Education Despatch' of 1854. This pointed out the rationale for "creating a properly articulated system of education from the primary school to the University". The Dispatch recommended the establishment in the Universities of Professorships "for the purposes of the delivery of lectures in various branches of learning including vernacular as well as classical languages". As a sequel, the University of Madras, organized on the model of London University, was incorporated on 5 September 1857, by an Act of the Legislative Council of India. The University has as its motto 'Doctrina Vim Promovet Insitam' meaning 'learning promotes (one's) innate talent'.

The University which had only 17 University departments, 30 teachers and 69 research scholars in 1912, has grown into a large teaching-cum-affiliating University with 18 Schools and 66 departments of post-graduate teaching and research and 100 Affiliated Colleges and 52 approved Research Institutions. The research and teaching functions of the University were enhanced by the report of the Sadler Commission and the gains were consolidated by the enactment of the Madras University Act of 1923, which is the basic Act that governs the University with subsequent amendments made from time to time.

An idea of the strides made by the University can be had from the number of university departments / colleges that have received special recognition by national and funding agencies.

CHOICE BASED CREDIT SYSTEM (CBCS) (Outline of Regulations)

Choice Based Credit System (CBCS)

The University Departments adopted the credit based semester system (CBSS) in 1997-98 and moved Choice Based Credit System (CBCS) from 2001-2002 onwards.

Choice-Based Credit System is a flexible system of learning. ‘Credit’ defines the quantum of contents / syllabus prescribed for a course and determines the number of hours of instruction required. The distinguishing features of CBCS are the following:

It permits students to

- * learn at their own pace
- * choose electives from a wide range of elective courses offered by the University departments
- * undergo additional courses and acquire more than the required number of credits
- * adopt an inter-disciplinary approach in learning
- * make best use of the expertise of available faculty

Courses

A programme consists of a number of courses. A ‘Course’ is a component (a paper) of a programme. Every course offered by any University department is identified by a unique course code. A course may be designed to involve lectures / tutorials / laboratory work / seminar / project work / practical training / report writing / Viva voce, etc or a combination of these, to meet effectively the teaching and learning needs and the credits are assigned suitably.

Semesters

An academic year consists of two semesters.

Odd Semester (I and III Semesters): July to November

Even Semester (II and IV Semesters): December to April

A semester normally extends over a period of 15 weeks. Each week has 30 working hours spread over a 5 day week.

Credit requirements for M.Phil., P.G., P.G.Diploma, Diploma and Certificate course:-

- |                          |      |             |
