Hi Abhishek

As you want to know about the comparison between these two colleges which is DY Patil Pimpri and k. wagh Nashik for computer engineering, I would say it doesn't matter if you choose any two colleges between the two. I judge colleges based on few factors-

1-Placements

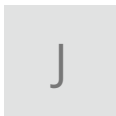

2-Infrastructure

3-Brand

I would say in terms of placements both these colleges are at par as both of these colleges placed 80% of their students and the average package was around 4-5 L. In terms of infrastructure, K.K WAGH is a better one to choose and in case of brand name DY Patil has a better brand name.

Hello Shubham Deshmukh, no, there are no benefits in fees merely because a student is from EWS quota. It's only for fixing or deciding a seat to the number of seats against which students from this category can be admitted. However there are schemes of the govt offering scholarship that a student can apply. You can have all the details from the administrative department of your college.

Best wishes to you.

Hello, it is not necessary to appear for it for getting admission in an engineering program. There are some institutions which gave admission to the students either they gave JEE Mains or not, like -
Netaji Subhash Institution of Technology, Delhi
Maharashtra Institution of Technology, Pune
Lovely Professional University, Punjab.
Anna University. etc.

I have 80% in Diploma, can I get direct 2nd year admission in mechanical engineering? I am OBC.

Hi Rupesh,

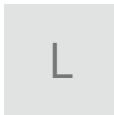

It is difficult to get admission for Mechanical Engineering with this score. As cutoff goes high up to 90-92% for diploma student to get admission for any branch in K K Wagh College for engineering. Mechanical is the branch where competition is more so I think it is difficult.
